

A Clash of Cultures Post-Thanksgiving Walking Tour

Date: Saturday, November 26, 2022

Time: 10 am – 11:30 am

Y Street Parking Lot, Hull, MA

Come Join HLM Board Member Sean Baggett as he leads a post-Thanksgiving, calorie-burning walking tour, exploring the clash of cultures between Europeans and indigenous peoples.

1620 was the pivotal year in the collective consciousness of our national psyche, but for more significant reasons than you may think. It was a rare period in history where two cultures, normally separated by 5000 years or more, found themselves living alongside one another. Some of these early experiences have found their way into our national mythology and others have been lost to the wind-blown sands of time. These early interactions were made by real people, dealing with real challenges, each with their own hopes for the future and their own views of the world in which they both shared. These first events laid a foundation for our country and set a path for a journey that we are still traveling some 400 years later. Come join us as we walk the cold and sandy path of the complicated peoples that met here so long ago.

Sean lives in the beautiful seaside community of Hull Village, Massachusetts. In addition to his career in cybersecurity, he is an avid historian and researcher on a variety of topics related to understanding and appreciating the human experience. He enjoys reminding... and being reminded of...how special and beautiful life can be. Sean is a Board Member of the Hull Lifesaving Museum.
